Like the Communist leader, Mr. Walesa, too, appears to be under conflicting pressures. On the one hand, he must heed the unchanelled and spontaneous impuls-es of Solidarity's diverse chapters and assert the organization's au-tonomy from the state. On the other, he needs to show cohesion and order in his sometimes unruly TRDKS.

Iran Hints at Progress In Hostage Negotiation

By Phil Davison TEHRAN — Iranian govern-ment spokesnan Behzad Nabavi Wednesday seemed to give a hint of progress in bargaining over the release of the 52 american hostages. Mr. Nabavi, the minister in charge of the bostage dealings, told a news conference that Iran had accepted that the United States and Iran should give unspecified "undertakings" to the Algerian government, acting as intermedi-

Diplomatic sources close to the negotiations said that the Iranians were speeding up their efforts to try to settle the hostage issue before the Jan. 16 deadline reportedly set by the Carter administration to wind up its work on the dispute before President-elect Reagan takes over.

The sources also said that the United States had increased its offer of financial guarantees to around $8 billion, one-third of the $24 billion guarantee demanded earlier by Iran in return for the hostages' freedom. Mr. Nabavi's talk of "undertakings" by the two sides, as opposed to previous Iranian demands for US guarantees that Washington would fulfill conditions for the hostages' release, raised specula-tion that Iran was softening its position

Raini Used Same Word

Premier Mohammed Ali Rajai used the same word on Tuesday when he said that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini had given his government the go-ahead to accept Algerian undertakings to solve the disoute.

Although Mr. Nabavi sought to play down the role of the Algerian intermediaries Wednesday, his rethe were doing a lot more than just acting as, in his words, "mainly messengers." He added: "The Algerian delo-would undertake to deliver some or all of the hostages to Algeria while the U.S. deposited cash in the same country as a guarantee that it would meet Iran's basic demands.

But, in vague and often ambigu-nus statements, Mr. Nabavi dismissed speculation that Iran was ready to accept any Algerian decisions, saying that remarks by Pre-mier Rajai on Tuesday, which seemed to suggest such an Iranian position, had been misinterpreted. "I was with Mr. Rajai when he (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

TEHRAN — Although Ayatollah Rahollah Khomeini gave his approval to Algerian assistance in efforts to release the 52 Ameri-can hostages, the precise terms of the Algerian role and the state of the negotiations remained unknown, Premier Mohammed Ali Rajai's appearance on television Tuesday night reporting that approval created further confusion and uncertainty.

The confusion stemmed from the premier's use of the Persian word tahod, which can be translated as meaning either "undertak-ing" or "guarantee." In the context of his remarks, the difference is critical

Interviewed on Iranian state television, Mr. Rajai said: "We asked the Imam [Khomeini] about the hostages and we explained the new view of the United States government to him. We also explained the Algerian proposal which suggested that it will [un-dertake, or guarantee] to solve our problems with the United States and the Imam permitted us to accept these [undertakings, or guarantees], and we hope to announce the rest of the points

If translated with the word "undertake," the statement would appear to indicate that the Algerians would be serving as some sort of go-betweens. If translated as "guarantee," it would appear that the Algerians were offering to stand behind the latest U.S. offer, giving some form of assurances that Iran would be able to recover its assets frozen by the United States

The differing possible interpretations of Mr. Rajai's remarks were illustrative of the linguistic difficulties that have frequently impeded Western understanding of events here and have plagued. the hostage negotiations.

"That is it, the Algerians have made guarantees and the hostages will soon go free," one Iranian, experienced in translating for Western reporters, said after watching Mr. Rejai on television. Another, equally experienced, who watched the same interview, shrugged his shoulders and indicated that Mr. Rajai's remarks

Opposition to Haig Is Waning As Senate Hearings Draw Near

Access to those records will probably be blocked by normal bureaucratic delays, according to Fred Thompson, the special coun-sel for the Republican majority of the Sonate confirmation panel. A far more serious blow occurred Tuesday, however, when former President Richard Nixon's lawyer, Herbert Miller, threatened court action to keep Senate Demo-crats from gaining access to the Nixon White House tapes or other documents relating to Gen. Haig. The Democrats have asked for material relating to Gen. Haig's role in the former president's Water-gate defense, in the eventual par-don of Mr. Nixon by President Gerald Ford, in wiretapping of officials and reporters during the Nixon years and in foreign policy advice on issues such as the bombing of Cambodia.

Restern PALMI, Italy — Imprisoned leaders of Italy's Red Brigades ur-ban guerrillas called Wednesday evening for the release of magis-trate Giovanni D'Urso, kidnapped by the Brigades on Dec. 12. A lawyer representing Renato Curcio, who founded the extreme leftist group in the early 1970s and is now held in Palmi jail in the toe of Italy, said that Mr. Curcio and other detainees had given him a written statement containing their views. The text was not immediately available, but the lawyer, Eduardo di Giovanni, said that the imprisoned guerrillas wrote in it that "Victory has been achieved," and that Mr. D'Urso should therefore be freed

The victory referred to was evidently the government's announce-ment of the imminent closure of a maximum security prison on the Sardinian island of Asinara, which was one of the demands made by Mr. D'Urso's captors.

Two Meetings

The statement was the jailed guerrillas' answer to the death sentence passed on the magistrate three days ago. Amouncing it, the kidnappers said they would suspend it until their jailed comrades had made their views known.

Their voice, to decide whether to carry out or suspend the execution of D'Urso, is the only one we are interested in hearing," the Red Brigades communique said.

Most of the captured Red Brigades leaders are known to be held at Palmi or at Trani, in southeast Italy, where security forces quelled a major rebellion last week. The Trani detainees have not yet issued their views.

Official Saw Prisoners

The Justice Ministry confirmed that an official had met guerrillas in the Palmi prison in Palmi, but did not reveal any details. Ministry officials were commenting on press reports that the meeting took place on Tuesday.

Parliamentarians from the small Radical Party, led by Sen. Gian-franco Spadaccia, talked to guerril-las imprisoned at Trani Tuesday and Wednesday. They refused to five any information about the give any information about the meeting.

The claims could not be independently verified. No reporters have been allowed into the front since Iran announced its coun-teroffensive Monday in the strategic heights of Gilan Gharb in west-ern Iran and in Khuzistan at the southern end of Iraq's invasion lines into Iran's oil heartland.

'Running out of Steam'

There was no firm word from either side on the size of grounds won or lost in the Iranian offensive, despite claims by both na-tions of having inflicted hundreds of fatalities. An army spokesman in Baghdad said Iraqi forces have surrounded an attacking enemy in-fantry force supported by tanks just south of the Iranian key high-

The state radio quoted the spokesman as saying the surround-ed force was being pounded by helicopter gunships and tanks and that the Iranian counteroffensive was "rapidly running out of steam.

Begin Coalition Nears Showdown in Knesset

By William Claiborne

Washington Post Service JERUSALEM — More than at any time since he was elected in 1977, Prime Minister Menachem Begin is facing the imminent col-lapse of his fragile parliamentary coalition and the prospect of an election before the end of his term.

The end to Mr. Begin's rightist Likud government - beset by rampant triple-digit inflation and constant interministerial squabbling -- could come as soon as next week. And, according to a timetable that was being circulated widely in the Knesset (parliament) Wednesday, a national election for a new parliament would be held on May 17, six months earlier than

The parties from the territory complained that Mr. Waldheim's statement had taken no specific note of their presence and demanded that they be identified as parties the way the insurgents were, rather than as members merely of the South African delegation. The demand led to a meeting lasting more than two hours between the secretary-general and Western and African representatives who are here to function as diplomatic picadors, goading the contending sides into the arena so that they can finally become en-gaged on the issues. A session was then scheduled for Thursday morning at which, it seemed likely, some sort of gesture would be made to the parties in the South African delegation.

Western and African diplomats still believe that the key decision on whether to proceed with a cease-fire will be made by Prime Minister Pieter Botha. But the effort to shift political responsibility for the decision to Mr. Mudge and his colleagues is interpreted as evidence that South Africa still sees a possibility of an agreement. Mr. Nujoma's movement has insisted that only it could speak for the people of Namibia and that it would negotiate with South Africa as the "colonial power" and not the parties South Africa brought to the conference. Nevertheless, his delegation offered no protest over the South African seating arrangement. A low-key approach, avoiding polemics, has been urged on Mr. Nujoma by the African states represented as observers at the meeting. These are the so-called "Front-Line States" - Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania and Zambia - plus Nigeria. Sen. Percy has repeatedly stressed that he wants Gen. Haig to be confirmed by the Jan. 20 inanguration date.

The hearings will open Friday, will include a Saturday session and will resume early next week. Although the hearings could run for several additional days, some Senate sources thought they would end sometime next week and that Gen. Haig, while available for as long as the hearings continue, will probably be the main witness only for the first three days.

Sen. Percy, as chairman, and Sen. Pell, as ranking minority member, will both make opening statements. Gen. Haig is preparing a lengthy one as well, addressing all of the foreign policy issues con-fronting the new administration.

The committee staff has prepared two thick briefing books for the 17 members. One involves the key foreign policy issues and the other is a collection of articles and documents that relate to Gen. Haig's government service.

Germany of Old Stands Erect At Funeral Services for Doenitz

By John Vinocur

New York Times Service AUMUHLE, West Germany The funeral wreaths lay piled in the snow and around them stood the men of Germany's past, shaking hands, introducing wives, and turning the funeral of Adolf Hitler's successor into a final grasp at justifying their part of history. "To Our Reich's President," said the gold letters on the black. and white ribbon of one of the wreaths. "Alles fur Deutschland," "Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, in honor and fidelity - the survivors of U-Boat 309," "Courage to the end," read some of the other inscriptions. The old phrases and the Gothic script were perfect symbols of the mood outside the red brick church at the edge of a forest 15 miles from Hamburg.

No Bonn Envoy

About 2,500 persons, some with Knight's Crosses tied with red and black ribbons around their necks, many in the cashmere overcoats of postwar West German prosperity, came to the church for the burial of Karl Doenitz, the grand admiral who administered the German state for 23 days in 1945 until the unconditional surrender that end-ed World War II in Europe. Convicted by the Nuremberg tribunal of war crimes and crimes against peace, Doenitz served a 10year sentence, and then lived out his life in this handsome suburban village until his death at 89 on Christmas Eve.

Although the West German government paid Doenitz the pension due his rank, and technically main-tained his name on the list of retired officers in spite of his Nuremberg conviction, the De-fense Ministry refused to send a representative to the funeral and forbade members of the armed forces to attend in uniform.

This infuriated the men from the old soldiers' leagues and rightist organizations who stood in knots in the snow outside the church, berating West German television reporters, telling them that they did not dare to broadcast "the truth about the grand admiral and the shame-regime in Bonn," and then refusing to give their names to go with their statements.

"He did his duty, what any de-cent soldier would do," a man wearing the naval-type cap of a veterans organization should before the service began. A friend with a scarf in the red, black and white colors of the Imperial Navy around his neck raised his voice even louder. "He was sentenced by a criminal Allied tribunal that broke every international standard to send him to jail! He was a hero of the German people!"

Thank the Foeirer

By contradiction, Doenitz was described last week by Robert Kempner, the depoty U.S. counsel at the Nuremberg trials, as a loyal assistant to Hitler. West German historians have described the admiral as rigid and remorseless, and there was testimony at the war crimes hearings that he advocated the killing of captured Allied mer-chant seamen.

"The German people," Doenitz said in 1944, "have the fuehrer to thank for everything, absolutely everything. If we hadn't been given the fuehrer, there would be no people left in Germany."

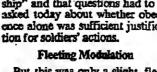

In military terms, of the 863 submarines under. Doenitz's com-mand, 756 were lost. Of the approximately 36,000 U-boat crew members, close to 28,000 were killed. But over the years, Doenitz's hindsight remained similar to that of the men who attended his funeral: Alfred Speer, Hitler's minister for war production, who spent time with the admiral in Spandau Prison, insisted that Doenitz told him that if he had another chance, he would have done it all again, exactly the same way. There were four eulogis for the admiral, whose coffin, draped with the red, black and yellow flag of West Gennany, was carried by 10 men wearing Knight's Crosses.

Doenitz was praised by Edward Wegener, a retired rear admiral, for his "unshakable fidelity to the leadership of the state" and as a man favorable to reform and new ideas. He also expressed an occasional, curious distance from the admiral at some points, suggesting that although Doenitz was not a member of the Nazi party, he was "woven into the guilt of its leader-

But this was only a slight, fleet-ing modulation in tone. The Bonn government, Mr. Wegener said, acted shamefully in trying to disassociate itself from the admiral, and the crowd outside the church, as if at a political rally, hooted with him in derision. When another backs of old friends, and sang bits

But there will be fewer Southerners and more people from the Middle West and Far West Instead of Georgians and consumer and human rights advocates, there will be more businessmen and bankers and advocates of laissez-faire. One major difference between the Reagan and Carter method of

For one thing, Mr. Kayser's point about financial sacrifice is no joke. Government salary ceilings have been raised by less than 6 percent in the last four years, while corporate executive compensation has gone up on average by at least 50 percent. The result: jobs offering $52,750 to $60,662 a year (plus generous perks) are being dangled before executives commanding well over $100,000 now, and in most cases $200,000 and over. Independently wealthy executives have an obvious attraction under the circumstances.

Other considerations are even more nettlesome, the executive recruiters concede. Before taking the job, there is the problem of finan-cial disclosure, much more rigid than was the case four years ago.

Although some Carter appointces were required to make personal financial statements, the Reagan administration is the first in which the disclosure forms will be routinely made public --- under the Ethics in Government Act passed

Contempt Finding Sought in Louisiana

U.S. Fights Judge in Desegregation Case

By John M. Crewdson New York Times Service

ALEXANDRIA, La. - The Justice Department has taken the rare step of seeking contempt of court proceedings against a state judge in Alexandria who has ordered local school officials to disregard a federal judge's order that three white students attend a racially mixed school as part of an areawide desegregation plan. The department's motion, asking that State Judge Richard Lee found in civil contempt, was filed in Shreveport late Tuesday after the judge appeared at all-white Buckeye High School Tuesday morning to order the admission of the three students, Michelle LaBorde, and Lynda McNeal, both 13-year-old eighth graders and Ramona Carbo, a 12-year-old seventh grader. Also named in the government motion were the parents of the girls, the principal of the Buckeye school and the superintendent of schools in Rapides Parish.

The motion will he argued before Nauman Scott, the federal district court judge who is the au-thor of the school desegregation plan issued last August that removed the families of the three girls from the rural Buckeye school district and included them in the attendance zone for the formerly all-black Jones Street Junior High School in Alexandria, About 100 other former Buckeye students are

By Douglas E. Kneeland New York Times Service WASHINGTON - When President-elect Reagan appeared at a Washington news conference to announce that James Brady would be his White House press secre-tary, he was asked if he thought Mr. Brady was "good-looking enough" for the job.

The tongue-in-check question was an allusion to published re-ports that Nancy Reagan was insisting upon good looks as a qualification for the new administration's spokesman.

The president-elect bridled at the inquiry and insisted that such reports were a "total invention out whole cloth."

"Nancy couldn't be more de-lighted and thinks he's absolutely State State handsome," Mr. Reagan added. The 40-year-old Mr. Brady has enough padding on a frame of about 6 feet to suggest rotundity and a hairline that has receded far enough to qualify for the descrip-tion "baldish." But persons who closely watched the selection prograduated in 1962 from the Unicess said that he had shown no signs of being troubled, as press secretary for the Republican transition team, by the rumored implication that he was not handsome enough to win the White House a doctorate in public administrapost or by more persistent reports that others had turned down offers of the job.

Sometimes his irrepressible na-ture gets him into trouble.

He was grounded from the Reagan campaign plane for most of a week near the end of the presidential race because he and another aide called out "killer trees. killer trees" as they flew over a forest, a not especially subtle reminder of their candidate's insistence in one speech that trees were a greater source of air pollution than automobiles. But by Election Day he was back with the candidate in the role of director of public affairs and research, which he had filled since April, shortly after John Connally, the former governor of Texas, whom he had served as campaign

Then there is the problem of what is next, what is banned by conflict-of-interest rules, when the political job runs its course. Although the basic conflict-ofinterest statute goes back to 1863, the standards have been rigorously enforced only in recent years. They prohibit those who have served in government from dealing in areas that they supervised during their Washington tenure.

The James team has retained the services of one of the most skilled washington, Fred Fielding, to brief potential appointees on the hurdles and ways around them.

Generally speaking, conflict-of-interest rules do not apply to those who deal in broad policy matters, but the appearance of a conflict ress secretary, withdrew from the "will encourage appointees to re-view their cases carefully," notes Jackson Walter, director of the Office of Government Ethics. That some executives will shy away from Washington because of such constraints was made abundantly clear recently when Frank Cary, chairman of International Business Machines, stepped aside from nomination to the board of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. His decision came only after he found out that his personal financial state ment would be published if he took the post.

Mr. James, who was also person-nel manager in the Nixon White House from 1971 to 1973, noted that a president has a "powerful persuader" in case of resistance. "Mr. Reagan will personally ask many of the more reluctant to serve," he said, and that personal call is hard to turn down.

Soviet Actress Is Refused Visa For Visit With Daughter in U.S. The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Zoya Fyodorova, a Russian actress who landed in Stalin's prisons after she gave birth to the child of a U.S. naval officer, said Wednesday that Soviet authories had denied her a visa to visit her daughter in the United States.

Miss Fyodorova, 68, said that she was told Monday that she could not make her fourth trip to the United States because "your daughter in America has behaved badly." She added: "They said I could try to apply again for a visa in six months."

Miss Fyodorova's daughter Victoria, who now lives in Connecticut, said Tuesday that her mother had told her by telephone that one visa official said Soviet authorities were upset about Victoria Fyodorova's book, "The Admiral's Daughter," published in 1979. It related her mother's wartime affair with the officer, Jackson

Tate - who left the Soviet Union without knowing that Miss Fyodorova was pregnant - and told of the mother's eight years in Soviet prisons and the difficulties the two women had before the daughter went to the United States in 1975 to meet her father, a retired admiral who died two years ago.

As Libya Eyes Chad

Libyan leader Moamer Qadhafi's dream of a great Saharan empire might prove in the long run to be a mirage, but his current effort to absorb vast, underpopulated Chad has more concrete elements to it than his usual vaporous adventures. For one thing, he has tanks and troops on the ground this time to enforce a merger - or to replace one bit of corporate jargon with a less-euphemistic one - a takeover. Of course, the on-again, offagain Chadian civil war has been sputtering along for 16 years now. Opposition leader Hissene Habre, a former defense minister, has promised to continue the struggle. The Libyan army's combat record 's about as impressive as Col. Qadhafi's record when it comes to consummating mergers. He has attempted and failed in the past to join Libya with Egypt and Tunisia, and an incomplete merger with Syria is still on the drawing board

Despite the consistency with which Libya has erred, though, the move into Chad must be taken seriously. It is unclear what effect it will have on the 5 million people who live in Chad, but a third of them are Christian or animist and it is unlikely that those citizens will be pleased to come under the dominion of the devoutly Moslem Col. Qadhafi. A Libyan takeover would also present problems for neighboring Nigeria and the Sudan, both of which have large minorities with secessionist tendencies. Other African countries, both in the Sahel and beyond, fear Libyan expansionism, and some such as Ghana, Gabon and Senegal have already broken diplomatic relations with Tripoli. The Libyans, themselves, have drawn up maps envisaging a "Greater Libya" including Chad, Niger, Tunisia and Algeria. There have been some reports that Col. Qadhafi's ambitions exceed even that.

But a greater source of concern is Libya's Soviet backing. There is evidence that Libyan strategy was planned by Russians and East Germans, and the Libyan forces are substantially Soviet armed. The critical question is, what are Moscow's ambitions in Chad? One possibility is that the largely desert country has both oil and uranium beneath its sands. But that is untested. It is certain, though, that in African terms, Chad is strategically located. It borders on Niger, from where France gets much of its uranium; Nigeria, a major oil exporter and Africa's most popu-lous country, as well as Sudan, Cameroon and the Central African Republic.

The Libyan takeover move, which is meet-ing little opposition, also deflates the notion that France can or will protect Western interests in Africa. The French have been reticent about their failure to try to prevent the Libyan takeover, except for a rather vague statement by Robert Galley, the minister in charge of relations with Third World countries, who said that France could not intervene in Chad as it did in Zaire in 1978 because Zaire was invaded from abroad (Anglola) and in Chad, France had been specifically requested to withdraw. The French surely could have arranged an invitation back in if they wanted it. One can't help but wonder what effect Franco-Soviet relations might have had on France's failure to seek it? Or Libvan oil?

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

El Salvador Countdown

The head of the junta's agrarian reform program and two U.S. advisers are the latest victims of the terror that is ravaging El Salvador. Beyond the human tragedy, the political loss is grievous. The agrarian program has been the centerpiece of the U.S.-backed effort to preempt Cuban-supported revolution, and as such it has been fought by the left. It has also been fought by upholders of the traditional, feudal status quo on the right. Having enemies like these is a tribute of sorts to the quite striking, if incomplete, success of the program so far. But it is a costly tribute, As the distribution of land to farmers is further inhibited, the junta's crucial attempt to consolidate a peasant base will be impaired.

Both left and right in El Salvador have stepped up violence in anticipation of Ronald Reagan. The left's guerrillas have launched a "final offensive" so as to present him with an "irreversible military situation" by Jan. 20. They seem not to understand that nothing could do more to strengthen those voices in the Reagan camp demanding to make El Salvador a test of the new administration's anti-Communism. Meanwhile, the right with its "death squads," some with government connections, is blowing on the fire, hoping to induce Mr. Reagan to commit U.S. prestige, arms and perhaps troops to the anti-Communist side - and, not so incidentally, to restore its old privilege by repudiating the agrarian reform.

Some influential Republicans, centering around Sen. Jesse Helmis, R-N.C., plainly would like him to go with the Salvadoran right. Fortunately, others would not. Jeane Kirkpatrick, ambassador-designate to the United Nations, reiterated the other day that the most appropriate policy was to support the junta. She is right. In practical terms, that means two things.

Above everything else, the violence must be controlled. That requires the new administration to do more than follow its natural inclination to help the junta resist violence on the left. It must also grant that the Carter administration has had good reason to encourage the junta to check the anti-popular violence on the right. Then, the new administration must make an unequivocal commitment to the agrarian reform. This program deserves to be seen not as some wild-eyed socialist scheme of the left, but as an effort to set up something like the family farms of the U.S. Midwest ---- to create a middle-class constituency.

Backing the junta is a long shot --- it has always been a long shot. It's simply the best

Understanding Conservatism

By George F. Will

WASHINGTON - The dullest WASHINGTON — The duliest eye can discern the enter-taining irouy. President-elect Reagan's transition apparatus (a body politic with a population ap-proaching that of several nations represented in the United Nations) has deprived conservatives of their obscied muth _ that concurrent cherished myth - that enormous bureaucracies are spawned by perverse liberals who, inexplicably, adore bureaucracies. Conservatives are inheriting an enormous government, and the transition apparatus necessarily mirrors that government, Furthermore, Mr. Reagan's peo-ple probably will not be able, or perhaps even inclined, to shrink their inheritance. Something — indeed almost everything - about the modern state causes it to swell. The principal cause probably is the modern citizenry.

Big Government

Conservatives correctly indict liberals who, believing in the ra-tionalization of society by central tion to play a more assertive role internationally, a role which may require, in addition to more weapity's desire to purchase some things, such as certain pension and health services, collectively. ons, more government activism in the management of international trade (of grains for example) and related facets of the domestic economy. Liberalism's incoherencies have made U.S. conservatism seem more coherent than it is. After the coming four-year collision with re-ality, it may more closely resemble traditional conservatism, which is to say, conservatism properly understood.

Transition Woes: Who's in Charge'

By James Reston

WASHINGTON --- On the slavia. Gen. Haig's intentic whole, the transition between the Carter and Reagan ad-ministrations has gone fairly well, but on the question of how to deal with the U.S. hostages in Iran, there have been some problems. With the manguration of President-elect Reagan rapidly ap-proaching the Carter administration sent what it regarded as its "final" compromise proposal for-the release of the hostages, attaching to it a deadline for reply of Jan. 16, four days before the Inauguration.

The Carter administration, recognizing that the consequences of . this proposal could probably not be dealt with before Mr. Reagan became president, asked Mr. Reagan's people to consider the message to Iran before it was delivered. According to the White House officials who drafted the compromise, Mr. Reagan's cabinet appointees refused to have anything to do with it, or even read it without an order from Mr. Reagan, which never came. Alexander Haig got the point, but was obviously preoccupied with his own confirmation problem. Caspar Weinberger was sym-pathetic, but passed it on to higher authority. Edwin Meese 3d listened but felt Iran was President Carter's responsibility and kept his distance from what he saw as problems of the past.

This is nothing new. Even in the depths of the 1930s Depression, during the transition from Herbert Hoover to Franklin Delano Roosewelt, when Hoover appealed to FDR for help in the face of bank closings, Roosevelt refused to co-operate and left the crisis to Hoover. Mr. Reagan has done the same thing, and now must deal with the consequences of Mr. Carter's "fi-nal offer," which he has refused to

There are other transition problems, still unresolved. Mr. Reagan's appointment schedule is running late. He has chosen his cabinet, but within a few days of his inauguration the critical deci-sions about his sub-cabinet positions have still not been made, and apparently there is a bit of a tussle within the Reagan camp about conversations.

For example, should Mr. Reagan's appointees as secretary of state and secretary of defense — Gen. Haig and Mr. Weinberger be free to select their own depu-ties, or should they be chosen by Mr. Reagan's victorious political affics?

Mr. Weinberger has chosen Frank Catucci, a Foreign Service officer who has served the Democrats in various high official and diplomatic posts, as his deputy diplomatic posts, as his deputy against the opposition of many conservative Reagan supporters. Gen. Haig has brought back to Washington Larry Eagleburger, who was Henry Kissinger's princi-pal administrative aide at the State Department, and has most recent-ly been U.S. ambassador to Yugoparently to have him as h cal secretary in the third office of the State Dep And Gen. Haig is also cc with Walter Stoessel, for: bassador to the Soviet Ur Poland, on the organization State Department.

Wrong Hail to the Chiefs

It is no disgrace for Caspar Weinberger to want to be confirmed as U.S. secretary of defense before he can articulate a coherent foreign policy and strategic doctrine. He comes to the Pentagon with the reputation of a vigorous budget cutter, an important attribute for an administration that seems tempted to throw money at military problems.

There will be time enough to learn the intricacies of arms control, naval deployments and recruiting. But there is not much more time for temporizing about the relationship between the civilian and military leaders of the armed forces. When asked whether he would fire the present chairman of the joint chiefs of staff for the crime of supporting the commander in chief on SALT-2, Mr. Weinberger's response should have been an eloquent "no."

To duck that elementary question was a mark not of inexperience but of insensitivity to the essence of his new assignment. The long-nourished tradition of U.S. military integrity and civilian supremacy stands at risk as long as the Reagan team even contemplates the dismissal of Gen. David Jones for blatant political reasons. As an individual, Gen. Jones is surely dispensable. But as a symbol of professional probity and political loyalty, he now needs to be protected.

When Mr. Weinberger gets around to ask-ing his joint chiefs whether they can defend the nation and fulfill their missions with another arms control treaty, without a military draft or without a base in Sandi Arabia, he should want the most dispassionate technical responses. And he should want his four-star officers to feel as free to contradict his inclibet available. THE WASHINGTON POST.

To fire Gen. Jones because he failed to fudge his counsel in anticipation of a new administration is to invite bad advice and perhaps even insubordination from his successors. Worse still, it is to encourage the occasional tendency of military leaders to intervene in the electoral process and for assorted presidential candidates to recruit their own

In point of fact, Gen. Jones and his fellow chiefs drove to the outer limits of propriety in bartering with President Carter over their support for SALT-2. In return, they won a huge increase in military spending, including the mammoth MX missile - not because they feared the treaty but because they feared that it might lull the United States into spending less than it wanted. They came perilously close to making a political judgment beyond their mandate. But in the end they spoke the truth: The treaty as such was no threat to security and no impediment to their desired buildup.

To imply that such truth-telling warrants dismissal from a new president is to plant an unhealthy seed in the mind of every senior officer. Mr. Weinberger had been alerted to the potential damage both by his immediate predecessor, Harold Brown, and by James Schlesinger, a former secretary who shares his strategic outlook. In saying on Tuesday that he was not ready to discuss the issue, Mr. Weinberger was confessing that he has not thought through his very first order of PARIS - Today's editorial in the Herald reads: "Liberia has been a sort of moral thorn in the consciousness of the American people. Aside from the dark-skinned immigrants from the United States early last century, few freemen have gone thither, and the mass of the population has consisted of indigenous Africans. Great Britain was the principal creditor of Liberia until the World War, but British banking chiefs recently discontinued operations because of the intolerable sanitary conditions in Liberia. When — if — Mr. Reagan does what some aides say he must, when he asks Congress to prune some of the biggest programs of "big gov-ernment," be may find that the number of "liberals" in the new 'conservative" Congress approaches 535.

Prominent conservatives have encouraged the public to believe that "efficient management" can cure "waste" and thereby make "big government" less big, without pain. Asked what sacrifices people must make, many conservatives re-spond that government has been living too well and it, not "the peomust sacrifice. This formulaple," must sacrifice. This formula-tion, although rhetorically potent, is analytically confused.

is analytically confused. When conservatives promise to get government "off the back" of "the people," who do they think put it there? The people's elected — and re-elected — representa-tives did. The culprits are legislative bodies, the most responsive branches of government, and especially state legislatures, those clos-est to constituents.

In the 1970s, Congress enacted 3,359 laws, which is bad enough. But New York's legislature enact-ed 9,780. The 50 state legislatures enacted approximately 250,000. Aim of Liberalism

The overriding aim of liberal-ism, properly understood, is the expansion of liberty. (U.S. "liberbreadbasket, that should, given the right crops, research and distribu-tion, be able to produce more than als" long since became what Euro-peans call "social democrats," pre-occupied with equality.) Conserva-tism, properly understood, rejects the idea of a single overriding aim. enough food to feed its burgeoning population.

Brunello Wins Italy Seal

By Terry Robards

New York Times Service NEW YORK - One of Italy's N greatest wines, the celebrat-ed Brunello di Montalcino, has achieved new stature under the Italian wine laws in a move that probably will mean greater scarci-ty and higher prices for consumers. Brunello, an intensely flavored red made near the medieval village of Montalcino in Tuscany, has be-come the first Italian wine of any kind to qualify for a government guarantee of quality. It has been accorded the denominazione di origine controllata e parantita, a status created by the Italian wine law of 1963. In the years since the law was passed, no other wine has been able to add the final word - garantita, mean-ing guaranteed - to its label. In becoming the first, Brunello has achieved a rank above all other Italian wines, although several will join it shortly.

'Trelawny' Revival: Adequate but Dull

By Sheridan Morley emational Herald Tribune

ONDON - Twice in the past L 15 years we've had the chance to see major revivals of Pinero's "Trelaway of the "Wells" --- once in a definitive National Theatre production and once in an imperfect but still haunting musical version by Julian Slade at Bristol. In offering it to us again, Timothy West - who played Gower in the Slade musical and is now director of this new production and the Old Vic, which houses it -- is perhaps also asking us to recall the play's historic links to the Vic in the happier if no less turbulent times before anyone thought of asking letting us have a fresh look at it. I O'Toole to play Macbeth there. was written, as were the others, for As an act of nostalgic historical homage this new "Trelawny" has all the virtues of a museum piece. What it lacks is any real indication of why the play matters so much, has fived so long and can still pack such power when it is done right. West's problems begin with the ac-tors: In a cast of almost 20, only Bill Fraser as Gower, Ken Wynne as Colpoys and June Ritchie as Avonia Bunn give performances that rise above the barely adequate, and as a result it is that such harder to care whether Rose Trelawny stays at her dear old Sadler's Wells or heads off to the rich life of Cavendish Square. Both nea ure or Cavendish Square Both locations ought to be strongly peo-pled if they are to present a real choice, and backstage at the Wells we find a group of very bad actors being played by a group of fairly bad actors apparently incapable of the towards the towering performances we need there.

Only when Fraser goes into the immortal speech about Kean and the splendid gypsies do we get, for a few seconds, an idea of what this lay is supposed to be about, while its secondary plot, that of the coming of the "new drama," is equally stymied by the inability of Robert Lindsay to suggest the visionary playwright who was in reality T.W.

The government pilot likes to No theater is better suited to tell about a former president's "Trelawny" than the Vic, but no play better illustrates the pitfalls of working with a scratch company unused to each other's styles or timing; only a very exciting actor can play a bore on the stage and by the same token only a very good company can suggest what it must be like to be in a very bad one. The Royal Shakespeare Com-pany in "Nicholas Nickleby" is wonderful at being tacky touring players precisely because its mem-bers have expertise; in "Trelaway" at the Vic there is an appalling lack of that expertise and the result is a 1950s repertory production --adequate but unexciting.

Starting with the vintage of 1980, their wines will be tasted periodically by a committee of growers from all over Italy and, if they do not measure up to the highest standards, they must be de-classified to simple red table wine that will be unable to carry the Bruncilo name - or price. Until now the Brunello producers theoretically could decide for themselves whether their wines merited the Brunello name, so long as they complied with the rules governing geographic origin, yield per acre, grape variety and method of vinification.

Brunello had been one of 205 wines accorded the next rating, decione di origine contre or DOC. Agreement of all the pro-ducers within a given region was required to apply for garantita, or DOCG, and the Brunello growers were the first to take the step. Government approval then was re-quired, followed by legislation.

Contoissen's Wine

Three other Italian reds well known among connoisseurs have also won approval for the garantita designation but lack the necessary legislation to use it. These are Barolo and Barbaresco from the Piemonte region and Vino Nobile di Montepulciano, another Tuscan vine.

Brunello has always been a connoisseur's wine. It is simil many ways to the best Chiantis, which also come from Tuscany, and it is made entirely from a local variety of the sangiovese grape that is dominant in Chianti wines. But when the grape is califivated around Montakino, it achieves a ino, it achieves a balance and finisse that even the best Chiantis tarely attain.

L ONDON - The undisputed winners in Margaret Brown's 1980 baby name competition are, once again, James and Elizabeth.

As she has done every year for as long as anyone can remember, Brown, of York, kept a tally of all births announced in The Times of London - 4,446 last year - and tabulated their names.

James, she found, was the top boy's name for the 17th consecutive year. In second place for boys, leaping from sixth, was Alexander and for girls, up from eighth place, Louise. The rest of the list for girls: Louise, Jane, Mary, Sarah, Alice, Clare, Victoria, Katherine and Alexandra. And for boys: William, Thomas, John, Edward, Charles, David, Robert and Rich-

Broadway

The 'Frankenstein' Flop

NEW YORK --- Jack Benny, Will Rogers, W.C. Fields, Fanny Brice and other vaudeville stars didn't really become famous until they had "played the Palace."

But "Frankenstein," the first play to open on Broadway in 1981, died at the famous theater this week.

There was a lock on the stage door after Sunday night's opening and closing of the ballyhooed reincamation of Mary Shelley's horror story. "It's all over," Terry Allen Kramer, one of the producers of the show, said after a last-ditch effort at resurrection Tuesday.

She went through a frantic but futile series of meetings and telephone calls trying to line up an additional $400,000, much of it for advertising and promotion to overcome bad reviews, in hopes of staging a Lazarus act for Tuesday evening's scheduled curtain.

She would not say how much she had invested or where she had sought more money. But New York restaurateur Joseph Kipness, anoth-er of the show's producers, said they were seeking more money from 20th Century-Fox, which had already kicked in about $250,000. The bomb by "Frankenstein" was of major proportions. Leo Stern, a publicist for the show, said the production costs, originally budgeted for $1.25 million but eventually approaching $2 million, probably made "Frankenstein" the most costly non-musical flop in the history of the Great White Way.

"It closed for the same reason most shows close - no business." Stern said.

Academicians and Magazines Point Rightward to Neoconservativism

New Reagan UN Envoy Is Example

By Bernard Weinranb New York Times Service

the right and left. Mr. Reagan was so impressed that he sat down and wrote a single-spaced, one-page let-ter to Mrs. Kirkpatrick praising the piece and suggesting that they meet. That led to Mrs. Kirkpatrick's support of Mr. Reagan in the presidential election and eventually to her ap-pointment as chief United States representa-tive to the United Nations. tive to the United Nations. The appointment reflects Mr. Reagan's foreign policy views. Perhaps more significantly, it underscores the emerging strength within the new administration of a group of magazines, such as Commentary, and an array of political scientists, anthors, economists and editors whose liberal and left-of-center views of 20 years ago would have been anathema to Mr.

Reagon. It is not that he has changed. It is that Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who calls herself a "Humphrey-Jackson Democrat," the editors of Commentary and The Public Interest, and social scientists, academicians and writers such as Seymour Lipset, Irving Kristol, James Wil-son, Norman Podhoretz, Robert Nisbet, Midge Decter, Sidney Hook and Nathan Glaz-er have journeyed rightward. little bumpy, stirring liberal wrath and the confusion of many longtime conservatives. And certainly the neoconservatives concede that they often differ with "mainstream conservatives," Mr. Reagan's traditional base, on trade union rights and collective bargaining issues.

Moral Majority

Moreover, the so-called New Right of Moreover, the so-called New Agin of Phyllis Schlafly, a leader of the anti-ERA movement, Jerry Falwell, a minister who is at the head of the Moral Majority, and Richard Viguerie, a direct mail expert, upset neoconser-vatives perhaps as much as they do the liberal loss left. Prayer in schools, the Moral Majority and, to some degree, abortion rights are issues in which neoconservatives maintain rather traditional liberal views.

Irving Kristol

Neoconservatives differ considerably on Neoconservatives differ considerably on such issues as homosexual rights and the Equal Rights Amendment, among others. The threads that bind them are a stern anti-Com-munism, an opposition to school busing and many affirmative action programs and a revul-sion to the New Left attacks on the United States in the 1960s.

Gone Too Far

Midge Decter, the writer, echoed the views Midge Decter, the writer, echoed the views of many neoconservatives when she observed recently: "For a long time liberal journalists said the country was moving to the right. It wasn't moving to the right at all. It was people saying, 'Hold on, this has gone too far.' Such neoconservatives as Sidney Hook, the philosopher who is now at the Hoover Institution for War, Peace and Revolution, also differ sharply with economic libertarians of the Mil-ton Freidman school who seek virtually no trade barriers and minimal government regula-

Neoconservatives are fond of pointing out that, unlike those libertarians, they strongly fa-vor trade restrictions with nations such as the Soviet Union and support traditional regulations that many conservatives seek to crase.

Without restrictions on drug imports, for example, neoconservatives argue that parents in the United States would have faced tragedies similar to those in England when the birth-deforming drug, Thalidomide, hit the market. With these differences, however, the neoconservatives are far more comfortable in the conservative camp than among liberals. "We are not a movement; there has never been a meet ing of neoconservatives," said Irving Kristol. "It's an intellectual current."

Gradual Evolution

and one of the godfathers of neoconservatism, describes his shift as "a gradual evolution." "The key events which shaped the evolution were the obvious ones," he says, "the campus revolts of the 1960s, the rise of the countercul-ture, the Great Society programs which many of us felt were misconceived, the reform of the Democratic Party and its takeover by the McGovernite wing, the immense growth of Government regulation. Liberalism hasn't failed. That's the problem. In succeeding its flaws became self-evident."

The New Look in Washington Challenges Labor's Prestige and Powe

By Philip Shabecoff New York Times Service WASHINGTON — Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO, is given to understated irony, and his comment when Raymond Donovan was nominated by President-elect Reagan to be secretary of labor was characteristically restrained but caustic. "I look forward to meeting Mr. Donovan," Mr. Kirkland said.

The naming of Mr. Donovan, and Mr. Kirkland's reaction, spoke volumes about what has happened to the power and prestige of the U.S. trade union movement — and the frustrations that the movement is likely to encounter with conservatives taking command in Washington. Perhaps for the first time, the president of the Ameri-can Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Or-ganizations was not consulted prior to the selection of a new labor secretary.

The new Congress that convened Monday is likely to cause other headaches for labor. Sen. BUCHAREST — Over and over, on the television broadcast, it was "President Nicolae Ceausescu and Elena Ceausescu ... President Nicolae Ceausescu and Elena Ceausescu

Scinteia (The Spark), the official Communist Party newspaper, used the same formula in nearly every paragraph of its report the following day on an official state visit of the Romanian leaders to neighboring Yugosla-

The 30-minute television special showed Mr. Ceausescu, 62, who is party chief as well as head of state, making the rounds of a for-mal international visit. In every scene, Mrs. Ceausescu was at his side. Rarely has a woman in Europe, east or west, gained so much political power and influence as Elena Ceausesca. The only comparable figure on the continent is Ludmilla Zhivkova, the daughter of Todor Zhivkov, president and Communist Party leader of Bulgaria, Romania's neighbor to the south.

Ms. Zhivkova, 38, who is culture minister of Bulgaria and a member of the party Politburo, is considered the second most powerful figure in her country.

Unique Figure

 $\tilde{\mathcal{N}}$

But Mrs. Ceausescu is unique in Eastern Europe, where the spouses of political lead-ers are generally much less visible than in the West, Inside Romania, her high profile is a source of deep resentment.

"He is not at all popular, but she is plainly hated," a Romanian intellectual and party member said. "He is absolutely secure in his position, but if she tried to succeed him there would be a terrible battle."

Last March, Mrs. Ceausescu, 61, was named one of three first deputy premiers — the latest in a long line of honors and titles granted her since 1972, when she first came to national prominence. She was already a member of the Communist Party's inner circle, the Executive Committee, and since last year has been in charge of the party cadres.

This role is especially significant now, since the Romanian Communists are engaged in an "exchange" of party cards that offers the leaders an opportunity to purge the ranks. She controls most party assignments.

In addition, Mrs. Ceausescu is chairman of the National Council of Science and Technology (the job that gave her Cabinet status), director of the Central Institute of Chemical Research, chairman of the chemical industry section of the Council for Economic and Social Development (headed by her husband), and chairman of the Commission for Standardization of the Economy. She is also a member of the party Central Committee and of the national Parliament

Huge Portrait

In the Romanian history museum, Mrs. Ceausescu gets only slightly less attention than her husband. Two floors of the museum are filled with gifts and honors given the conple, including a massive portrait of them in native dress ascending through clouds and escorted by young Communist Pioneers and doves of peace.

The significance of her position is emphasized by the treatment given her by the offi-cial media — she is usually pictured at her husband's right hand in official portraits.

"She helped him up the party ladder, advising him whom to make friends with and whom to drop," one Western diplomat said.

"He is used to taking her advice." Mrs. Ceausescu first became visible in 1972 when she was suddenly promoted to the party Central Committee without going through the usual preparatory stage as a can-didate member. Until then, she had been only a member of the Bucharest City Committee Trained as a chemical engineer, she reportedly met Mr. Ceausescu when they were both active as young Communists; he joined the party in 1933 and she joined four years later.

Personality Cult

Mr. Ceausescu became chief of the party in 1965 and took the title of state president in 1974. Like no other present leader in Europe, he has built a personality cult that permits no challenge to his position.

"He is like our king," a government spokesman once said.

Mr. Ceausescu takes on more individual responsibility than any other politician in Europe for both party and state affairs --- he will open a new supermarket, inspect farmers' markets, receive new foreign ambassa-dors and give detailed instructions to underlings in his frequent, long speeches. The leader's wife was hailed in the official press on her 60th birthday in January, 1979, as "a model to be followed by all the women in the country." She was also described as "a model mother" and as "the most just woman on earth.'

But she is also seen as vindictive and unreasonable by underlings in the party. "She holds grudges," a Westerner said. "If you cross her, you are likely to find yourself

Romanians rarely seem to talk about the Ceausescus for fear of the country's many informers and secret policemen. "There are certain subjects we never talk about," a young Romanian said. "We figure that any time there are five people together one of them is an informer.

Elena Ceansesen's role in Romania is only the most prominent aspect of the remarkable family patronage gained by the president's relatives.

Their son, Nicu, is a secretary of the Par-liament and a secretary of the Young Communists. Another son, Valentin, apparently not interested in politics, is a physicist at a nuclear center. Their danghter, Zoe, is head of a mathematics institute.

Eight Ceausescu relatives are members of the party Central Committee and five of his brothers hold official positions. Among the brothers are Ilie, who is a major general, a senior political officer in the Defense Ministry and vice chairman of the Parliament's defense committee, and Ion, who is a deputy minister of agriculture and a member of the party's Central Auditing Commission.

One of Mr. Ceausescu's sisters, Maria, is married to a former premier and another, Regina, is wife of the present premier, Ilie Verdet. The father-in-law of Valentin Ceausescu, Janos Fazekas, is a deputy prime minister.

TEL AVIV - Five hundred years ago, the Mzeni tribe of bedouin Arabs crossed the Gulf of Aqaba to settle in the Sinai Peninsula, bringing with them the black bedouin goat. In the intervening centuries the flocks spread north as far as the Negev desert of Isra-el, displaying marvels of adaptability as they migrated - an ability to go four days without water; thrive on chewed stems of sm-dried bushes, and still give plentiful milk. With much of the world facing food short-ages, and a wide strip of it in perennial drought, Israel scientists are now making comprehensive studies of the shaggy, friendly, har-dy little goat. Tests have shown it to be remarkably productive, both in milk and meat, cheap to feed and resistant to the most extreme desert conditions.

"Consider the Sahel," said Professor Amiram Shkolnik, referring to the droughtplagued belt of sub-Saharan Africa. "The African goat gives one-third the milk of the black bedouin goat, and can only go one day without water. So it overgrazes the areas around the watering places, denuding the vegetation.

Team of Zoologists

The black bedouin goat can go four days without water, meaning it can graze over four times the area. The same number of our goats would be in harmony with the vegetation, and would not cause overgrazing. The solution to the problems of the Sahel is to adopt our goat animals. "For one thing, if a woman gets money for it, her husband may take it away. And if a woman doesn't have any goats, and doesn't have any money, her husband may divorce her — and find another wife with more goats."

So the university's flock of 30 goats are culls, and Mr. Shkolnik thinks the test results from the best of his animals would be more

Synthetic Insulin: Lilly vs. Novo

NEW YORK - The first great marketing battle for a genetically engineered product has begun and the competition involves large stakes in both the United States and Europe.

That is how Neil Sweig, analyst at Shearson Loeb Rhoades, sees Eli Lilly's race with Novo Industri, a Danish company traded over the coun-incustr, a Danish company traded over the colli-ter, to be first in selling synthetic human insulin. "Both are spending millions of dollars on re-search to develop a less expensive human insulin to replace the animal insulin currently dominating world markets," Mr. Sweig said. Aside from the health benefits involved, he believes the two are moving ahead quickly so that each can use the new product to invade the other's market. He estimated that Lilly has 85 to 90 percent of the U.S. market and that Novo has 60 percent of the European market. He estimates sales total about $100 million in each of the markets.

Lilly claims to be far ahead in developing human insulin through genetic engineering. On its part, Novo recently announced a new chemical synthesis method for producing a highly purified product. "Based partly on this new method, Novo recently established a U.S. subsidiary operation,"

Mr. Sweig said. Insulin has been produced commercially for nearly 60 years from the organs of awine and cattle. Recent strides in manipulation of genetic codes of bacteria, however, have opened the pros-pect of mass production of synthetic insulin. "Lilly has finished phase one of tests of synthetic insulin in healthy volunteers," the analyst said, "and is building a very large factory in the United States and a smaller one in the United Kingdom, Recent tests showed that, on a preliminary basis, the synthetic insulin closely mimics the animal insulin and has few side effects.

Mr. Sweig believes that the attitude of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is the key to the approval of synthetic insulin and said that he expects the agency to accelerate its consideration of Lilly's product. He said that "Lilly's product could enter the U.S. in 1982 or 1983."

Novo also has expertise in the fermentation processes used in making synthetic insulin and is experimenting with it, although it is relying main-ly on chemical synthesis.

To reduce Novo's share of the European insuin market, Lilly will have to introduce an insulin that's just as pure," Mr. Sweig said. "Currently, Novo's animal insulin contains less than one part in one million of a contaminant called proinsulin, the precursor of insulin. Novo claims that its new process will produce insulin as pure as that which is on the market."

Right now, Mr. Sweig is not betting there will be one clear winner in the race; he can envision an outcome in which both do well in entering each other's markets. "Neither is going to push the other out of its markets, although it is going to be difficult for such other entrants as Squibb, Nor-fisk (a smaller Danish company) and Hoechst (of West Germany) to become major factors," he said. "The two bigs will stay the two bigs." Mr. Sweig said that the decision may come down to which of the two does better in providing an insulin that functions smoothly in implantable "pumps" that continously infuse a diabetic with small quantities of insulin. Serving as articifical pancreas glands, the small pumps may become common in the mid-1930s, he said.

Lengthy Legal Fight Foreseen

IBM to Challenge EEC Antitrust Charges

By Axel Krause

nal Herald Tribune PARIS - In what could emerge as a protracted legal battle, International Business Machines said Wednesday it will challenge complaints by the EEC Commission that it has violated antitrust rules by abusing its dominant position Western Europe's multibilliondollar computer market. "IBM is confident that we have fully complied with the rules of the EEC and in the course of 1981 we will respond formally. Later, de-pending on how the EEC reacts, there could be an appeal to the Eu-ropean Court of Justice in Luxembourg," an IBM spokesman said in Paris. Industry and EEC officials interviewed Wednesday predicted a legal battle extending throughout this year and probably beyond.

Case Called Strong

"Based on considerable research into this affair over the past few years, including complaints from both U.S. and European computer companies, as well as from their customers, we feel we have a strong case regarding IBM's activi-ties in the Common Market," Willy Schlieder, director general of the EEC's competition directorate,

'On a formal basis, all we have done to date is send IBM what we refer to as a statement of objections, which is but a first step," he said. Mr. Schlieder stressed that the EEC's basic goal is to change IBM's business behavior. This approach, he said, contrasted sharply with the protracted ef-fort by the U.S. Justice Department to break IBM into several independent and competing computer companics. We are aiming at behavioral control in the interests of IBM's U.S. and European competitors, plus enstomers," Mr. Schlieder said, noting it was the EEC's first antitrust action against a computer company. However, he added that t was not designed to make room for such EEC-based competitors as France's CII-Honeywell Bull and West Gemany's Siemens group.

Fed Won't Ease Its Grip On Credit, Volcker Says

WASHINGTON - Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volck-er said Wednesday that his panel will continue tight credit policies while waiting for the Reagan administration and Congress to for-mulate new fiscal policy. Mr. Volcker, testifying before

NEWS ANALYSIS

Republicans in the Reagan camp. "Going to a gold standard would be a move of despair," said Richard Nixon's economic council chairman, Herbert Stein. He con-tends that the economic situation is not yet that bad. But Mr. Lehrman is not a one-issue man. He is known to believe that a coherent economic policy must stress equally four or five ma-jor themes — all dovetailing close-ly with basic Reagan views. But his controversial stand on gold — the view for which he is best known could eventually disqualify him from a top administration job.

The Republicans seem acutely aware of the critical nature of the undersecretary job — in substance and symbolism — although Presi-dent Carter unaccountably has left it vacant since March, when Mr.

Solomon went to the Fed. Treasury Secretary William Mil-ler and Mr. Solomon never quite hit it off. Mr. Solomon (who had been in the job from the start of the Carter administration, under Michael Blumenthal) believed that in late 1978 and early 1979 the administration was letting the econo-my get out of hand, and that Mr. Miller himself was a poor secre-

Treasury insiders now conclude that Mr. Miller wanted to show Mr. Solomon that the Treasury Mr. Solonon that the freasury could do just fine without him, and that Deputy Secretary Robert Carswell and Assistant Secretary Fred Bergsten could share Mr. So-lomon's responsibilities as well as perform their own jobs.

Everything considered, Mr. Carswell and Mr. Bergsten did well enough. But as one New York financial analyst pointed out, "To the foreigners who pay close atten-tion to these things, the senior po-sition wasn't filled. What that says is that the function was downgraded." White House officials said this week that they never sent any names over to Mr. Miller, and his own. "Miller is a funny guy," a de-partment insider said. "He's a loner; his inclination is not to go out and get people. In a sense [not filling the position] was a put-down to Tomy [Mr. Solomon]. And his margard uns coursed between HERE may actually be boys ornate building, the souver who want to murder their fa- their bid to become capital . thers and sleep with their mothers. but in "Kingdoms." Barry Targan addresses himself to a quite different primordial desire: a boy's dream of running away from home with his father.

When the boy's mother dies in a car accident and his father's best friend shoots himself because he has not been given tenure at the college where they both teach, the father impulsively throws up his career as a professor of English with three books to his credit.

"Literature is too redemptive," he says. "It makes everything all right." Nothing that has been writ-ten, he argues, is bitter enough. None of it prepared us for the terribleness of our dispossessed lives, our unaccommodated lives." Although he is serious, we must remember that this is a bereaved man speaking and that he is referring to literature up to 1951, before it became bitter enough for anybody.

Embracing the World

He is the kind of man who must love something. Since he cannot love another woman, he will have to broaden his love to life itself. He'll have to embrace the world. He converts a pickup truck into a camper and drives off with his 11year-old son in "a great curve of irony." "Adventure," the father says, "is hardship aesthetically considered." His adventure is ontological, he travels through being. "Place," he observes, "is the only thing you can trust." He and his son will read places as he used to read books. The world will be their library and their blackboard.

"Kingdoms" is an unabashedly romantic novel. Targan is not afraid to describe his protagonist as an "amanuensis to the human condition." The father says that he has "lost faith in human constructions, in the determined life." Order, he believes, is dying, and there is only variety, the illimitable vari-ety of these disunited states.

"Throw hither all your quaint enameled eyes": This is his first quotation to his son as they embark on a trip that is an intermin-able funeral and something more. Feeling that his son has lost so much in the death of his mother, the father is almost frenzied to give him everything he himself has. The son says, "I was an appetite and motion was my game."

They have many games. His father, who is good with his hands, works as an itinerant repairman, tinker, carpenter, stonemason, jack-of-all-trades. When they are invited to dinner by their employers, which is often, his father in-vents elaborate fictional lives that are tailored to their audiences.

One of their favorite games is visiting small towns that have sick-ened but not died. When the new highway bypassed them, or the riv-er veered away, or an industry Jan. 22. The other nomihighway bypassed them, or the rivstate, to provide a suitable for the legislature.

Florida Judge Keeps .357 Magnum At His Side After a 'Heavy' Hearing

The Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A judge anned himself with a .357-caliber Magnum pistol Tuesday after a 326-pound man accused of as-sault and battery became angered and rushed the bench.

Judge Thomas Coker, who said he usually keeps the weapon under his bench, did not have it when the prisoner, Joshua Thomas, 30, of Miami rushed toward him. During the outburst, he said, he slipped out of the courtroom, got the pistol and then put it under his bench for the rest of the day.

"That was the biggest man I ever saw in my life," the judge said. "He kept saying, "Shoot me! Shoot me!" It's probably just as well I didn't have it.

Mr. Thomas, who is 6 feet 6 inches tall, charged forward and grabbed Judge Coker's nameplate. In the process, court officials said, he fell on a table, breaking one of its legs. Bailiffs wrestled him to the floor and he was taken to the jail, wearing leg irons.

BRIDGE_

GULLIBLE non-bridge players often fall for the three-cardtrick, also called the three-card monte, find the lady or, in French, un bonneteau. Gullible bridge play-ers often fall for the 52-card-trick, in which the sleight-of-hand is mental not physical. The player who fancies his analysis is shown all the cards and asked whether he wishes to play or defend --- with a small wager attached.

The best bonneteau to come out of France in some time is the diagramed deal, and the reader should now decide whether he wishes to play or defend four spades after three rounds of diamonds are led. The bonneteau creator, basing his work on a deal that appeared originally in this depart-ment, is Robert Lattes, who helped France win a world team title a quarter of a century ago but then abandoned bridge for mathematics.

Let us say that you choose to play four spades. West continues diamonds, and you must decide what to do at the third trick. You think about discarding, but realize that East will throw a heart and leave you helpless. You think of ruffing low in dummy, but see that East can overruff and play a trump effectively, catting you off from dummy's heart tricks.

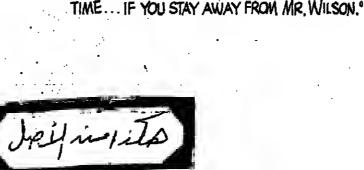

But you have spotted a way to make the contract and win the bet. You announce your intention to ruff the third trick with the spade king. This will set up a trump trick for East, but you plan to turn this to your advantage by cashing the heart acc and playing three rounds of trumps. This end plays East, and whether he returns a club or a heart, the club losers in the closed hand disappear.

You have noticed that East can-not save himself by unblocking the jack-ten of trumps under the acc-queen, for you will be able to lead the deuce of spades and he will have to win with the three. So you feel you have camed your profit, and hold out your hand for the cash.

Unfortunately, your tormentor produces a most ingenious comtermove. When you ruff with the spade king he underruffs with a spade honor. He plays the other honor when a trump is led and

No Panic

This is Pearson's eighth season as a Cowboy. He and his experienced playmates had been in these who-struck-John situations before They do not panic. The clock doesn't worry them. They have faith in themselves, and in prayer. How much good prayer and their many-splendored talents will do them Sunday is anybody's guess. Once the assignment would have looked like a piece of cake, for there was a time when the Eagles were their pigeons. Dallas beat Philadelphia 11 times in a row over one span of years, and ran the string to 21 vio tories in 23 matches. Now, though the Eagles have their best team in 20 years. The Philadelphia players feel they are good enough to beat Dallas and had hoped to be home on Sunday playing the Cowboys instead of in Atlanta against the Falcons.

Stat Static

The play-by-play details of the Cowboys' stretch run in Atlanta turn up an interesting point. A statistic dear to the heart of television is "third-down conversions." Graphics on the TV screen frequently mention how many times a team's third-down play has been good for a first down that enables the team to retain possession. It is a misleading statistic, because a truly efficient offense never reachs third down.

. So it was in the Cowboys' last two touchdown drives. When they were trailing, 27-17, they completed four passes for a total of 62 yards and only twice did they reach second down. Third-down efficiency is an excellent thing in a football team. First-down efficiency is better.

Falcoury The fact that the Cowboys are going against a good team in Phila-delphia won't wony them. They went against a good team in Atlan-ta. When the season opened, the Falcons had many questions to be answered. They had to find a re-placement for Jim Mitchell, a tight end who had been released. They found Junior Miller, a rookie from Nebraska, who was one of their leading scorers during the season." They needed another stout runner besides William Andrews. Mutt-and-Jeff pairings of scrumhalves and No. 8s are stock roles in Five Nations championship. England has Steve Smith (5 feet 8 inches tall) behind John Scott (6-4). There were French captain Jacques Fouroux (5-4) and Jean-Fierre Bastiat (6-6) in the late '70s and Welshmen Gareth Edwards (5-8) and Mervyn Davies (6-4) in the mid-'70s. Lock forwards are about 6-5. One of a team's two centers is often short: Scotland's Jim Renwick is 5-8 and France's Didier Codomion is 5-6. The wing forwards who swoop down on the scrumhalf like giant shrikes range between 5-10 and 6-3. Gearless No one wears any protective gear, bar the occasional skull barness (to protect the cars) that developed into the U.S. football heimet. Such is reality down on the quiet grass. Not that there's anything wrong with imaginary trumpets. Sport is about dreaming before it's about craft. "You've got to believe," Andre Boniface has said in recalling his early-'60s reign as the best center in the world, "that there's nothing you can't accomplish." The big dream comes first. Then you spend your life shaping up to the stern little boy in you.

The new year has now brought the annual trial matches leading up to the selecting of na-tional teams this week. On Jan. 17, the first of the five championship Saturdays that end March 21, Wales will host England while Scotland plays in France. Ireland sits out opening day.

Boys vs. Men?

New Zealand, South African and Australian successes have caused moaning about a supposed sudden transformation of Europe into a second division of world rugby. Mervya Davies grumbled over his beer that New Zealand had made the Weish look like schoolboys playing the men."

He exaggerated. While it is true that Wales and France are having transition blues after leading Europe in the '70s, either or both might recover quickly. France beat New Zealand convincingly in Auckland in 1979; Ireland won both its 1979 tests in Australia; England certainly has one of the three best forward units in the world and Scotland may have the best backs.

Season-End Power

Besides, there is nothing new about Springbok and All Black power, especially at the end of the Southern Hemisphere season against Northern Hemisphere countries playing at the start of theirs. And New Zealand had been building up to that Nov. 1 Welsh test for several years.

The 10 world leaders played an even 200 games against each other in the 70s. The victory percentages provide standings for the decade: South Africa .775, Wales .724, New Zealand .690, France .632, Ireland .420, Scotland .362, England .327, Australia .324, Argentina .222, Romania .167.

New Factor

What is new is the end of the boycott of South Africa that followed New Zealand's 1976 tonr there, with the concomitant disruptioo of the Montreal Olympics. After the British Lions and France last year, Ireland is to go to South Africa next May. And the Springboks are to tour New Zealand in July and August, It will be their first visit to a major rugby country since they came to France in 1974.

Just as significant for world rugby is the steady ascent of Romania, which lost to Wales, 13-12, in Cardiff late in 1979; tied Ireland, 13-13, last Oct. 18 in Dublin; beat France, 15-0, in Bucharest on Nov. 23; will go to Scotland next September before hosting New Zealand in November, and has at last been invited to England (1983). Argentina's recent results include an 18-18 draw with France in Buenos Aires in 1977, a 13-13 draw with England at Twicken-ham in 1978, a 24-13 defeat of Australia in Buenos Aires in 1979 and (disguised as a multi-national South American team) strong showings in South Africa

The Future Is Still a Long Way Off

-Now, as coach of the Philadelphia Flyers, Ounn still hears angr voices directed his way. The following interview with Quinn was conducted recently in Winnipeg by Washington Post writer Robert Fachet. Fachet: What is your philosophy of the way hockey should be played? Quinn: Hockey is a contact game that unfortunately for a stretch got away from real contact. Eliminating an opponent from the play is important. But too many young players are not trained to use their bodies for contact. We're asking them to hit and a lot of them don't know how, but they want to please the coach, so they try anyway, and that's where slows and high sticks come in. I've always liked contact as a player and it was fun for me, but you can't force everybody to be a Pat Quinn.

Developmental Product

Some players shouldn't be hitting, but at least they can eliminate an opponent from the play. Physical provess is a skill just like stickhan-ding. Contact should not be eliminated, but in a number of developmental leagues checking is not permitted and that contributes to poor skills later on

The NHL is the product of what's happening at the developmental level. We've introduced more movement to the game and we are drafting more goys who can skate well and consequently we're opening things up. I certainly advocate solid forechecking. We try to get the puck back in our offensive zone. If it's not in our defensive zone, the opposition won't

In each city we go to, we read how one of the home team's tougher players expects to fight with the Flyers. The coaches use that to psych up their teams and it makes it easy to perpetuate the image. If two teams are ready to play a physical game, then something usually happens. Teams should be ready for that and I don't mean with sticks - I've never liked that.

But what bothers me is the drivel written by people who have never scen us play. They just rehash old stuff and perpetuate the image. People love to hate us. That's okay, it gets our guys ready to play. We deserve a lot of penalties, but we shouldn't be 300 minutes ahead of everybody.

Other teams do the same things and they're not called the way they are on us. Our guys are tough, hard-uosed guys who do get cibows and sticks up occasionally. I don't want bad penaltics, but I don't want my guys to change.

Q.: Are you upset when someone refers in print to your teams as a bunch of hooligans?

Refs: Coustant Readers

A .: I don't understand it. I've played a lot of years in the game and I don't teach tactics they say we use. Some guys on all teams use their sticks, get them up occasionally. I don't believe intent is involved. It's in vogue now to write about it. But if I was coaching against the Flyers, I'd get it in print. Referees read the papers and if the coaches can set up the referees, they'll look for things. I try to look at it objectively, but we've had the least power-play advantages and the most time to kill penalties. We've had a lot of hooking and holding calls. Hooking and holding are usually used by poorer teams, because it's the only way to keep up. We're usually the more talented team and we're not trying to slow the game down. But we've drawn a ton of those. Q .: Did you really call Sports Illustrated a "Commie" magazine?

Not That It Matters

A.: I was ready for a shower after practice and I thought the interview was over. We'd been talking about Sports illustrated attacking the Flyers and our reporters were trying to get me to say something, but I wouldn't, because 1 really don't care what Sports Illustrated says

So I just said that about not paying attention to a Commie magazine, just off the cuff and not scrious. I never expected to see it in print. Q.: Everywhere you go, the opposition is pointing for you. Does this tend to wear your team down after a while?

A.: If we get a lot of short-handed time because of penalties, it can wear down the guys on the penalty-killing units. That happened to us in the playoffs last year. But as far as getting up for a game, our players like

When you know the other team is ready, it makes you get up and it gives you a lot more satisfaction. I'd much rather play teams that gear up for us. That's why I think the new setup for next year is great. I'm excited about it.

I think the tighter league is great for hockey and 1 think our division will be as competitive as hell. 1 do think the playoff setup is bad, though The division winner should be rewarded, maybe playing a weaker team in the first round, instead of the Caps or Islanders right off the bat. Q .: What changes would you like to see in the NHL?

No Magicians in the League

A.: I'd like to see a format where coaches can meet and exchange ideas. We're behind the times by pretending we have secrets, that we wave a magic wand and make our team better.

We need increased communication on the ice between officials and players. Even the captains can't talk to the referees anymore, and I think lack of communication is the reason every coach thinks there's a problem with the officiating.

We have to get more involved and provide more input at the amateur level, channeling teaching toward developing athletes for our game, so we don't get a 20-year-old product so far away from what we want he's almost useless to us.

"Carter's teeth are too big. Reagan's teeth have just the right bite size.

"The Toothpaste Association never lets politics interfere in the selection of its 'Best Smile' list. I also had to drop Fritz Mondale he has a weak smile."

"Who have you replaced him with?" "George Bush. When he smiles, he lights up a room." "Ed Muskie has a nice smile. Is he still on the list?" "No, he didn't make it. We also had to drop Zbigniew Brzezinski."

How could you drop Brzezinski? He's got one of the great smiles in the country. I wish I could smile like he does."

"I would have kept him on the list but I had to make room for Al Haig. We've had our eye on Haig ever since he worked for Nixon. Finally we decided he deserved to make the list." "It's funny, I never saw Al Haig smile when he was working for Nixon." "Oh, he smiled a lot. It wasn't an ear-to-car smile, but it had a nice quiet dignity to it." "I don't see Teddy Kennedy's name on the board." "No, Teddy didn't make it. We gave that slot to Strom Thurmond. We think Strom has the most ingratiating smile of anyone in the Senate.

"I can't argue with you there. Did any women make the list?" "Nancy Reagan did."

"And Rosalynn Carter didn't." "How did you know?" "It was a lucky guess." "Maureen Reagan cased out Amy Carter by six votes."

That was a squeaker. I see you That was a tough one. Spectao-nlar Bid has one of the finest sets of teeth in the country. But when it comes to a great grin, Sugar Ray Leonard now has him beat."

"Wait a minute. Have you re-placed Walter Cronkite with Dan Rather?'

"Dan Rather has beautiful gums.'

"So does Walter Cronkite." "But when Rather smiles, you also see his dimples. We've been scouting Rather for some time --we decided his time had come." * * *

Keeper of the Flame

Lotte Lenya at 80 Fans Kurt Weill's Words and Music

By Wolf Von Eckardt Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Lotte Lenya shines W brightest as the keeper of the flame. Indeed, to borrow a phrase from "September Song," it is she, the singing actress, who made that flame of the indescent leaves of Kurt Weill's music. The flame, much like the raw colors and hurled forms of German Expressionist paint-ing, illuminated an era of political failure but incredibly successful cultural revolution; Berlin in the 1920s.

What happened in the art and film studios, in the concert halls and on the stages of Germany between the Kaiser and Hitler has profoundly influenced Western culture. A recent evening of Kurt Well's music - performed under the auspices of the National Museum of American Art, and the occasion for a visit to Washington by Lenya - is further evidence of that. Lenya was born Karoline Blamauer on Oct. 18, 1900, in Hitzing, a working-class dis-trict of Vienna. Her father was a coachman, her mother a laundress, and a working-class dignity is still predominant in her. During World War I she lived with an aunt in Zurich, learning ballet at the Stadttheater. When the war was over, Berlin was suddenly the magnet for rebellious young artists.

Lenya landed bit parts there in Moliere and in Frank Wedekind's "Fruehlings Erwachen" ("The Awakening of Spring"). She soon met, lived with and married a short, pudgy, balding composer with thick eyeglass-es, named Kurt Weill. He was 24 at the time, studying with Ferruccio Busoni.

"All these questions, all this analyzing!" Lenya said of the modern view of Berlin in its heyday. "We had fun. I guess fun does not fit into art historical theory. They had fun overthrowing conventional concepts in art and architecture that had be-come too rigid to be fertile. And when Weill, Lenya and Bertolt Brecht, in 1927, went to the modern music festival in ritzy Baden-Baden, they had fun overthrowing conventional concepts of opera with their first version of

"Mahagoony." Weill and Brecht used the ordinary to give voice to an artistic expression of protest. It took an ordinary, untrained, defiantly un-operatic voice to make the point that even opera was to belong to the masses.

"Mahagonny" was a small success in Baden-Baden. It encouraged Brecht and Well to start work on the full opera of their mythi-cal city of greed. But a commission in-terfered. Ernst-Josef Anfricht, a young producer, had just bought Berlin's Theater am open with. He got it. Commissioned by Aufricht, Brecht and Weill burriedly wrote "The Threepenny Opera" to meet the deadline. The dress rehearsal on Aug. 30, 1928, was more than usually chaotic. Lenya's name had accidently been omitted from the program. At the time she was virtually unknown.

Schiffbauerdamm. He needed a sensation to

The next day she was famous. She had become part of Weimar culture. The Weimar Republic, however, lasted fewer than five years more. The Weills fied to France the day Hitler stamped it out. In 1935, Max Reinhardt staged the colos-sal drama "The Eternal Road," by Franz Werfel, in New York. Reinhardt brought Weill in to write the score. Lenya had a small part in the spectacle.

The United States enthusiastically welcomed the immigrant talent. But the run and fame of "The Eternal Road" were less than eternal, and while the others soon became American celebrifies, Lenya was famous no longer. For 10 years or so she dropped out of sight. "At that time, hardly anyone here had heard of 'Pirate Jenny' and The Threepenny Opera," she said. "There wasn't really any-thing for me to do — except to help my hus-band the best way I could. I stayed home and kept house for him so he could work: And oh, how he worked."

Brecht probably would have liked to con-tinue the partnership, but Weill, as Lenya re-lated it, was damned if he'd go on setting Karl Marx to music." There was nothing he wanted to protest in the United States.

"The problem was to find new writers, new librettists," Lenya said. "In Berlin we did not have to look for artists. They were somehow always there."

Weill worked with Alan Jay Lerner, Max-well Anderson, Ogden Nash, Langston Hughes and Ira Gershwin, among others. Beginning with "Johnny Johnson," in 1936, he produced one musical hit after another: "Knickerbocker Holiday," "Lady in the Dark," "One Touch of Venus," "Street Scene," "Lost in the Stars."

Suddenly, in 1950, he was dead of a heart attack. He was 50 years old. "I still can't talk about it," said Lenya.

Not the End

She stayed quietly in their house in the country, 30 miles from Broadway. Eventually she was married again, to George Davis, a magazine editor.

But that's not the end of the story. The chain-smoking Lenya lit another ciga-retic and thought about just how the flame was rekindled.

"It was in 1953," she said, "when Leonard Bernstein suggested we arrange a Weill con-cert at Brandeis University. It was an enormous success. Everybody kept humming Threepenny Opera' for days and days.

"Shortly afterwards, a German record company asked me to record Weill's Theater Songs.' The time was just ripe for that kind of revival... One producer after another called, asking to do Threepenny Opera.' But they all wanted to change it. They said it was too difficult or too this or too that. I kept saying, sorry, we produce it exactly as writ-ten or we don't produce it.

tion, exactly as written, off-Broadway in the Theatre de Lys.

"I sang Pirate Jenny again and the show ran for just a few days short of seven years." Louis Armstrong made "Mack the Knife"

a global hit. "Threepenny Opera" was simultaneously performed on both sides of the Berlin Wall.

vals. She helped produce and sang for a recording including songs that had been cut (in part as too daring) from the original produc-tion. While she worked on it in Berlin, her

Would Lenya like to go on stage again? She does not hesitate. "Of course I would. But movies would be even better. I would

The young U.S. actress Brooke Shields heads Mr. Blackwell of Hollywood's list of 1980's worstdressed women. He said she "looks like a Halloween trick without the treat." Also on the 21st annual worst-dressed list: actresses Elizabeth Taylor (" 'Forever Amber' in drag"), Suzanne Somers ("recycled" spaghetti") and Bo Derek ("a butterfly wearing her cocoon") and Charlene Tilton of TV's "Dallas." ("a pin-up for Fredericks of Hollywood"). Also on Mr. Blackwell's hit list are Queen Bentrix of the Netherlands ("Cinderella after midnight"), actress-singer Susan Anton ("an ad for a swap meet"), Among (an ad lot a swap meet), golfer Nancy Lopez ("a swinging fashion tragedy"), Princess Grace of Monaco ("dowdy") and singer Marie Osmood ("unplug this Christmas tree"). Derek headed last year's list and Taylor is a repeater who has become a life member of the designer's "Hall of Fame."
